

'STOP BUYING LIQUOR', HOOVER WARNS

MEXICO IN REVOLT; AID OF CALLES ASKED BY GIL

CAPITAL NOW MENACED ON THREE SIDES

Two Generals Lead Insurrection In Favor of Former Diplomat.

MEXICO CITY, March 4.—The grim spectre of revolution again
cast its shadow over Mexico today.

Simultaneous uprisings were reported in the northern border states and in the central states
along the eastern coast. The state of Alisco, directly west of here,
is also in revolt, according to unconfirmed reports.

The rebels are believed to be in control of eight states in all.
Loyal federal troops here, therefore, are faced with the necessity of being ready to defend the capital on three sides.

CALLES IN CHARGE

President Emilio Portes Gil is taking stringent measures to curb the revolt. He has appointed former President Plutarco Elias Calles secretary of war. Calles is in personal charge of the loyal troops.

Strict government censorship of all news dispatches prevails here.

The rebel forces, commanded by General Jesus Maria Aguirre, apparently are in control of almost the entire state of Vera Cruz.
The cities of Vera Cruz, Jalapa, Orizaba and Perote are believed to have fallen into their hands. Perote is an important strategic point
as it controls access to Vera Cruz.

In the north, General Francisco Llanero apparently holds sway in Sonora and surrounding states.
His troops are credited with having seized Nogales, a town near the American border. Gov. To-pete, of Sonora, is said to be supporting Llanero.

LINDY IN MEXICO

It is understood that the purpose of the revolution is to place Gilberto Valenzuela, former minister to Great Britain, in the presidency. He recently announced his candidacy and violently denounced Portes Gil's policies.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Miss Anne Spencer Morrow, his financier, and the latter's parents, Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W.
Morrow were expected to come here from Cuernavaca today. They had intended staying at the Morrow country home until tomorrow,
but it is believed they will return to the security of the American embassy owing to the startling developments.

CURTIS TAKES DAWES' POST

Ex-Senator With Blood of Indians In Veins, Becomes Vice President.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—Charles Curtis, of Kansas, was inaugurated today as vice president of the United States.

The genial resourceful senator from Kansas who once was a jockey on frontier racetracks, was sworn into office by his predecessor, Charles G. Dawes, before a distinguished assemblage that crowded every nook in the senate chamber. The incoming and retiring presidents, congress, the supreme court and a host of guests witnessed the ceremony.

Curtis achieved the second highest gift within the power of the American people after 38 years in public life. 29 of them in the senate and 14 in the house. His ascension to office held one new note in that it brought for the first time to the vice presidency a man in whose veins runs the blood of Indian chiefs.

Once the oath was administered, Dawes banged his gavel for the last time, adjourned the old senate sine die and turned the duties over to Curtis. The new vice president, as his first act, convened the new senate of the 71st congress in special session and delivered a modest, conservative inaugural address.

"ALIBI" SEIZED WITH JACK MCGURN

Louise Rolfe, who was seized with Jack McGurn, alleged Capone henchman, and through whose testimony McGurn will attempt to establish alibi to fight the charge that he led the execution squad that slaughtered seven Chicago gangsters on St.
Valentine's Day.

The executive committee of the Pickaway county Farm Bureau recently completed arrangements for the protection of its membership against thieves. The Ohio Farm bureau has set aside a budget for the maintenance of this service and has established the Farm Bureau Protective service. The budget provides for the payment of $35 in case of grand larceny and $15 in case of petit larceny for the capture and conviction of thief or thieves taking property of any person chiefly responsible for arrest and conviction of the thief.

In case two or more are equally responsible, the reward will be divided.
- 5.—To be eligible Farm Bureau
members must post their farm
with at least three farm bureau protective signs. These signs may be obtained at the farm bureau office.

The Ohio Farm Bureau Protective service has been patterned from a similar service which has been in successful operation in the New York organization for several years.

GEORGE LAMB IS GIVEN PROMOTION

George Lamb, son-in-law of Charles E. Fausnaugh of Circleville, has been appointed disciplinarian at the Boys Industrial School at Lancaster, to succeed L.
A. Miskell as the result of investigation into the death at the school of Hamilton Jett, 17, Marietta. Lamb, who was assistant superintendent of the school, is the husband of the former Hattie Fausnaugh.

Miskell was declared unsuited to the work of disciplinarian and was transferred to the position of garage mechanic, which he formerly held.

Herbert Hoover Given Cemetery Near Lancaster

LANCASTER, O., March 4.—
When Herbert Hoover was inaugurated president of the United States, Monday, he became the owner of a one-acre tract of land lying west of Lancaster which he may use for his burial ground
only.

According to court records here,
this tract known as the "President's Acre" was deeded 100 years ago to President Andrew Jackson and to his successors in office forever to be used as their burial ground.

Mr. Hoover was the 26th president to be notified of this privilege on his inauguration day. The burial ground is surrounded by an octagon stone wall three feet thick and eight feet high. An inscription chiseled over the arch gateway tells of the purpose for which the land was intended.

The donor, Nathaniel Wilson, died in 1833, after planting the tract with locust trees and cedar of Lebanon brought from the Holy-land. These grew to giant size and were destroyed by a tornado
a few years ago.

enson. Adolbert N. Fuller has sold his little farm on the Columbus pike to Alva J. Valentine.
Both deals were made by the Cir-

ORPHANED BOY OF IOWA NOW LEADS NATION

Herbert Hoover Takes Oath
of Office Before Vast Throng at Capital.

CAPITOL PLAZA, WASHING-TON, March 4.—An Iowa boy, who developed into a globe-trotting engineer whose work for many years made him almost a stranger to his own country, became the thirtieth president of the United States today amid inaugural pomp and pageantry such as the capital has not witnessed in a quarter of a century.

Bare-headed in the chill March wind, right hand upraised to heaven, left hand resting upon the Biblical tenets of his Quaker faith, Herbert Hoover took the oath of the highest office in the land while a distinguished company on the east steps of the capitol sent their cheers and applause rolling wave-like across the crowded plaza.

Two ex-presidents were in that company, something no inauguration has seen before.

There was Calvin Coolidge, thin-faced and taciturn, who but a moment before had laid down the burdens his successor was assuming.

TAFT GIVES OATH

There was William Howard Taft, corpulent and jovial, the twenty-sixth president, now chief justice, who twenty years ago this murky March day, at the same time and on the selfsame spot, himself took the oath which he today administered the incoming executive.

And there on the white and gold platform, too, mingling with the hoity-toity of officialdom, was a group of Herbert Hoover's boy-hood neighbors, from out where the corn grows tall. The prod-est of the lot was "Old John" Reeder, 92, holding the hat of the man he remembered only as a barefoot boy in West Branch, Ia., whose mother taught the faith in a poor Quaker community. Hard by "Old John" was Newt Butler, another Iowan, who once "licked"
the round-faced man standing there so solemn and stern-visaged.
Newt wasn't belligerent today. He was awed.

CAPITAL IS THRONED

In front of the new president as he stood facing the black-robed chief justice stretched row upon row of upturned faces. These were the elite of the inaugural hosts, those who by position or influence rated officials seats for the historic occasion.

Behind him on the other side of the big dome of the capitol stretched a solid mile of packed humanity on both sides of Pennsylvania, from the peace monument to the White House. They gathered early on their hard-purchased, hard-bottomed circus-chairs, waiting patiently for the moment when the new president would come riding back down the avenue in solitary state, to be followed later by the pageantry of marching thousands.

Overhead was the steady drone of airplanes.

What his thoughts were as he stood there with upraised hand listening to the chief justice intoning the words of the oath only Mr. Hoover himself knows. But they might very well have been,
"here am I, an orphan boy, born in poverty, self-educated and successful by my own efforts, un-schooling in politics, and now attaining the leadership of the most powerful country in the world by the greatest vote ever given any man in the world's history. Such is the miracle and the opportunity of my country."

SOLONS TO DISCUSS RURAL POLICE BILL

Representative Malter Marion
will provide two members of the Ohio legislature to address the Circleville Chamber of Commerce
Tuesday evening at its regular dinner meeting on the provisions of the proposed bill to create a

is expected to be present to hear the discussion of this important proposed law.

Herbert Hoover

Modern Transportation and Radio Give Whole Nation Part In Inaugural Undreamed of 140 Years Ago; Washington Rode 8 Days; Hoover Motors 15 Minutes

WASHINGTON, March 4.—The
inauguration of a President in this
motorized and radio age is a com-
siderably different business from 140 years ago this blustery spring
when George Washington "with
a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I
have words to express" struggled
for a week through forests and
stream on horseback to reach New York to assume the reigns of an infant and wobbly government.

Herbert Hoover zips from the White House to the capitol today
in about 15 minutes to become the thirty-first President of the United States by his own seeking. And untold millions of his countrymen
sitting in their homes and their
offices, hear the historic words
with which he accepts his high
place.

George Washington, the first President, rode hard for a week,
fording streams, encountering cold
and fatigue, in order to reluctantly accept the task imposed upon him by popular sentiment. And outside of a handful of people in
New York nobody heard his inaugural speech. In the far recesses
of Indiana and Kentucky the scattered white settlers did not learn
for months that Washington really was president.

NO WHITE HOUSE THEN

There wasn't any White House
in 1789. In fact, there wasn't any city of Washington. Pennsylvania
Avenue, over which Mr. Hoover and Mr. Coolidge rode in swift silence today, was an unsurveyed
wilderness.

Gen. Washington left his "farm"
at Mount Vernon on April 16, 1789,
for the long and hazardous journey. How he felt about it is set forth in his diary of that date:

"About 10 o'clock I bade adieu
to Mount Vernon, to private life,
and domestic felicity, and with a
mind oppressed with more anxious
and painful sensations than I have
words to express, set out for New York in company with Mr. Thompson, secretary of the Continental Congress, and Col. Humphreys
with the best disposition to render
service to my country in obedience
to its calls, but with less hope of
answering its expectations."

And only a few weeks before, he was still further indication of his real innermost feelings in a letter
to Gen. Knox, his old friend, who was to become later his first Secretary of War.

FELT LIKE CULPRIT

"In confidence I tell you, believe that my movements in the chair of government will be as compounded by feelings not only of the
of a culprit, who is proud to be placed in execution, so that I am in the evening of a life consumed
in public cares, to be a witness of a public execution, I feel that without that compulsion of political skill, abilities and influence which are necessary to manage the helm, I am sensible that I am embarking the care of the people, and a good name of my
own in this voyage; but what returns will be made for them, Heaven alone can foretell. Integrity and firmness are all I can promise."

But if Washington himself was dubious and depressed, not so the people who greeted him everywhere enroute, and who made his journey an occasion for expressing their overwhelming admiration
and reverence for the successful
Father of American Liberty.

The provincial newspapers of
that time tell it eloquently. For example:

"Alexandria—The great and illustrious citizen of America,
George Washington, Esq., passed
through this town on his way to New York. He was met some miles out of town by a numerous
escort of his friends and neighbors
whose attachment to him was such
that, not satisfied with attending

GOOD PRICES ONT. B. COWS

Is Sold By Local Cooperative Association.

The first consignment of tubercular cattle to the Pickaway Livestock Cooperative was received Saturday.

The consignment consisted of 11
head of cows. The association
made a very satisfactory sale of these cows on the weights over
the scales at the local yards in Circleville.

Five of the cows brought seven cents each, eight cents and three for six and half cents and two for six cents per pound.

The Pickaway Livestock Cooperative is extending this service to
the owners of tubercular cattle to assist them in receiving greatest possible salvage per head.

These prices on local weights,
when compared with the markets,
indicates the advance of assen-
bling the reactors in this manner.

SAYS FATE OF NATION RESTS ON OBEDIENCE

New President Devotes Third
of Inaugural Address On Booze Issue.

CAPITOL PLAZA, WASHING-TON, March 4.—Herbert Hoover
inaugurated his presidency today
with a challenge and a plea to the American people to obey the laws
which they themselves have fastened into the constitution and written into the statutes of the land.

On the selfsame spot where so
many of his predecessors have
stood and solemnly voiced their
hopes and high purposes, the man
who is assuming his first elective
office became the thirtieth president of the United States, declares in his first public utterance
that the greatest menace to America today is "disregard and
disobedience of law."

It was no stereotyped plea for
law observance that Mr. Hoover
made at the outset of his administration—it was a direct and personal challenge to the ordinary
law-abiding citizen to quit buying bootleg liquor.

APPEALS TO MILLIONS

And he was addressing not only
the thousands immediately in front of him but tens of millions
who constituted his radio audience.

"There would be little traffic in illegal liquor if only criminals
patronized it," he said.

"No greater national service
can be given by men and women
of good will—who, I know, are not unmindful of the responsibilities of citizenship—than that they should, by their example, assist
in stamping out crime and corruptly by refusing to patronize and subsidize the bootlegger with illegal liquor."

"Our whole system of self-government will crumble if officials
elect that laws they will enforce
or citizens elect what laws they

PROMISES NEW EFFORTS

For his own part, the new president pledged determined and unflinching efforts to secure justice enforcement. But in the same breath he admitted that no efforts by the government can be successful without the co-operation of the average man and woman.

"The measure of success that
the government shall attain," he
said, "will depend upon the moral support which you, as citizens, en-tend."

As a start toward clearing up
the prohibition mess, Mr. Hoover
proclaimed his intention of appointing a fact-finding commission "for a searching investigation" of the whole structure and
as a further step he proposed the
transfer of enforcement from the treasury to the department of justice.

The importance with which the new president regards the probation and law-enforcement situation was exemplified by the fact that he devoted nearly a third of
his inaugural address to it—and
the first third, at that.

PEACE IS ADVOCATED

The only other subject to receive such extended treatment
was world peace.

"I covet for this administration,"
he said, "a record of having further contributed to advance the cause of peace."

And to this end, he proclaimed
America's willingness to "take a practical part in all useful international undertakings," made a
"sincere offer" to the world powers to engage in further limitation
of armament, and expressed a

Herbert Hoover

inauguration of a President in this
motorized and radio age is a com-
siderably different business from 140 years ago this blustery spring
when George Washington "with
a mind oppressed with more anxious and painful sensations than I
have words to express" struggled
York to assume the reigns of an
infant and wobbly government.

Herbert Hoover zips from the White House to the capitol today
in about 15 minutes to become the
thirty-first President of the United States by his own seeking. And
sitting in their homes and their

place.

George Washington, the first President, rode hard for a week,
fording streams, encountering cold
and fatigue, in order to reluctantly accept the task imposed upon
him by popular sentiment. And
outside of a handful of people in
New York nobody heard his inaugural speech. In the far recesses
of Indiana and Kentucky the scattered white settlers did not learn
for months that Washington really was president.

NO WHITE HOUSE THEN
There wasn't any White House
in 1789. In fact, there wasn't any
Avenue, over which Mr. Hoover
and Mr. Coolidge rode in swift sil-
lence today, was an unsurveyed
wilderness.

Gen. Washington left his "farm"
at Mount Vernon on April 16, 1789,
for the long and hazardous jour-
ney. How he felt about it is set forth in his diary of that date.

"About 10 o'clock I bade adieu
to Mount Vernon, to private life,
and domestic felicity, and with a
and painful sensations than I have
words to express, set out for New York in company with Mr. Thom-
with the best disposition to render
answering its expectations."

"still further indication of his
real innermost feelings in a letter
to Gen. Knox, his old friend, who
was to become later his first Secretary of War:

"In confidence I tell you," he wrote, "that my movements to the chair of government will be accompanied by feelings not unlike those of a culprit, who is going to the place of execution, so unwilling am I, in the evening of a life consumed in public cares, to quit a peaceful abode for an ocean of difficulties, without that competency of political skill, abilities and inclination, which are necessary to manage the helm. I am sensible that I am embarking the voice of the

turns will be made for them, Heaven alone can foretell. Integrity
and firmness are all I can promise."

But if Washington himself was
dubious and depressed, not so the
people who greeted him every-
journey an occasion for express-
ing their overwhelming admiration
Father of American Liberty.

The provincial newspapers of
that time tell it eloquently. For
example:

"Alexandria—The great and illustrious citizen of America,
through this town on his way to
miles out of town by a numerous
escort of his friends and neighbors
that, not satisfied with attending

Is Sold By Local Co-operative Association.

The first consignment of tubercular cattle to the Pickaway Livestock Cooperative was received Saturday.

The consignment consisted of 11
head of cows. The association
made a very satisfactory sale on
these cows on the weights over
Circleville.

Five of the cows brought seven cents, two sold for eight cents and three for six and half cents per pound.

The Pickaway Livestock Cooperative is extending this service to
the owners of tubercular cattle to
assist them in receiving greatest
possible salvage per head.

These prices on local weights,
when compared with the markets,
indicates the advance of assembling the reactors in this manner,

Booze Issue.

CAPITOL PLAZA, WASHING-
TON, March 4.—Herbert Hoover
inaugurated his presidency today
with a challenge and a plea to the American people to obey the laws
which they themselves have fast-
ened into the constitution and
written into the statutes of the
land.

On the selfsame spot where so
many of his predecessors have
stood and solemnly voiced their
hopes and high purposes, the man
who is assuming his first elective
office became the thirtieth president of the United States, de-
that the greatest menace to
disobedience of law."

It was no stereotyped plea for
law observance that Mr. Hoover
made at the outset of his administration—it was a direct and personal challenge to the ordinary
law-abiding citizen to quit buying
bootleg liquor.

And he was addressing not only
front of him but tens of millions
who constituted his radio audience.

"There would be little traffic in
illegal liquor if only criminals
patronized it," he said.

"No greater national service
can be given by men and women
of good will—who, I know, are
not unmindful of the responsibilities of citizenship—than that they should, by their example, assist
in stamping out crime and outlawry by refusing participation in and condemning all transactions with illegal liquor.

"Our whole system of self-government will crumble if officials
elect that laws they will enforce
or citizens elect what laws they

For his own part, the new president pledged determined and unflinching efforts to secure better enforcement. But in the same
forts by the government can be successful without the co-operation of the average man and woman.

"The measure of success that
said, "will depend upon the moral support which you, as citizens, extend."

As a start toward clearing up
proclaimed his intention of ap-
pointing a fact-finding commission "for a searching investigation" of the whole structure and
transfer of enforcement from the
treasury to the department of
justice.

The importance with which the
new president regards the probhibition and law-enforcement situation was exemplified by the fact
that he devoted nearly a third of

The only other subject to receive such extended treatment
was world peace.

"I covet for this administration," he said, "a record of having further contributed to advance the cause of peace."

And to this end, he proclaimed
America's willingness to "take a practical part in all useful international undertakings," made a
"sincere offer" to the world pow-
of armament; and expressed a

Approximately 400 students, comprising the high school and

GLORIOUS HEALTH REPLACES TWENTY YEARS' MISERY

Noah Bowsher Thankful He Tried Spinago As Last Resort.

"Oh lucky day, when I discovered Spinago." This and similar exclamations are daily made concerning this new master tonic containing spinach by many Circleville residents whose homes have been brightened by health and happiness after taking Spinago. Glorious, new health has been brought to many residents of this and other cities after they had despaired of ever being themselves again. Just the other day Mr. Noah Bowsher who resides at the Main Hotel, Circleville and is employed by the Midwest Box Co., came into the Mykrantz Pharmacy, 107 N. Court St., Circleville headquarters for Spinago, and told how Spinago had relieved him after twenty years' unsuccessful doctoring and trying of many patent medicines. He went on to say:

"Those twenty years of misery are not pleasant to recall. Dyspepsia, gas on the stomach and indigestion brought on practically continual sick headache. My appetite was very poor and eating was never a pleasure. Constipation caused me to feel drowsy most of the time. My vitality was so low that many times I was practically unable to get around. Several attacks of acute indigestion made my life miserable. I never knew when the next one was coming. During those twenty years, I was going to doctors all the time and trying one medicine after another, but my troubles didn't end. I had just about given up hope when I heard of Spinago and the wonderful relief it was giving others."

NOAH BOWSHER

At first I thought that it was just another patent medicine and I didn't pay much attention to the claims made for it. But finally, after hearing praise from so many people I decided that it couldn't do any harm to try it. It was sure a lucky decision for me, as my twenty years of suffering were ended by two bottles of Spinago. I can truthfully say that it is better than any medicine I have ever taken because it cured my constipation and put my digestive system in perfect shape. I am not troubled with dyspepsia or gas any more. No more sick headaches arising from these troubles has returned and I have more pep than I have had for twenty years. I enjoy my meals now and my appetite is fine.

"Any medicine that will do this much for me after twenty years of misery can surely help many others to enjoy life, and I want to heartily recommend Spinago to everyone who is troubled with any of my former complaints."

Again Spinago has scored in a stubborn case and has pointed the way to health and happiness to another sufferer of many years. And it has succeeded simply because it is a practical tonic based on a practical idea, that spinach is one most valuable of foods to aid digestion, cleanse and build up the system and to purify and enrich the blood. Spinach, recommended by physicians for many years to serve the human system by aiding the bodily functions mentioned above is the basic and most important ingredient of Spinago and is present in concentrated form in every bottle in sufficient quantity to contain all the beneficial elements in many pounds of green spinach. With this valuable ingredient, the manufacturers of Spinago have compounded ten roots, herbs and barks of well known medicinal and dietetic value to produce a tonic well balanced, palatable and efficient. Based upon such a formula, it is not surprising that Spinago can accomplish such feats.

SPINAGO is sold on an absolutely guaranteed basis, so it costs nothing to try it. The price is one dollar per bottle or five dollars for six bottles. And if one two or six bottles do not produce the desired results, the money is cheerfully refunded. Why not try Spinago on this plan? You can't lose.

Cole Family Known All Over World Important Factor in Dietary Fields

Families capable of being welcomed into any home circle, be it rich or poor, are indeed rare, so folks, meet the Cole Family! Here is an unusual family with whom every housewife should become acquainted and which should have entree into every home.

The growing popularity of this family is due to the fact that its various members are rich in vitamins, minerals and other substances necessary for a balanced diet.

Yes, you've guessed it! the Cole Family belongs to the Vegetable Kingdom and its principal members are cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale and brussel sprouts. The home-maker with an eye to the health of her household and a desire for variety will find the following recipes for preparing these succulent vegetables both tempting and wholesome.

Milk is a valuable adjunct in the preparation of these recipes. Evaporated milk is preferred because of its superior flavor, low water content and richness in health building vitamins. It is particularly rich in butterfat which accounts for the remarkable flavor it imparts.

Baked Cauliflower
1 medium cauliflower, 1 1/2 cups thin white for
1 tsp. salt 1/2 cup grated cheese
Remove leaves and cut stalk from cauliflower. Soak in a solution of 1 tsp. vinegar, 1 tsp. salt and 1 quart of water, 15 minutes, to remove dirt and insects. Cook whole, stem up, in boiling water, to which salt has been added, 7 minutes. Put cauliflower in an oiled baking dish. Add white sauce. Cover top with grated cheese and brown in medium oven (375°F.). Yield: 5 servings.

Escalloped Cabbage
1 small head 1 cup grated cheese
cabbage 1 cup buttered
1 tsp. salt 1/2 cup crisp bacon
1 1/2 cups thin white 1/2 cup crisp bacon
1/2 green pepper, chopped
Cut the cabbage into eighths and cook in boiling salted water 8 min.

Broccoli Au Gratin
3 cups cooked broccoli
1 tsp. butter
1 tsp. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper
Broccoli resembles green cauliflower. Remove all dead leaves. Soak in slightly salted water to remove insects and dirt. Drop broccoli into boiling salted water. Have just enough water to cover. Cook rapidly in open kettle, until tender. Ten or fifteen minutes cooking should be quite sufficient to make it tender. Drain broccoli thoroughly and place in an oiled baking dish. Cover with white sauce made of butter, flour, salt, pepper and diluted milk. Sprinkle cheese over surface. Place in a moderate oven until cheese melts. Serve immediately. Yield: 6 servings.

Creamed Brussel Sprouts
1 quart Brussel sprouts
1 qt. boiling water
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. butter
1/2 tsp. flour
Clean sprouts by removing outer imperfect leaves and cutting the stalk off close to head. Soak in cold water ten or fifteen minutes to remove insects and dirt. Cook rapidly in boiling salted water in an open kettle. From eight to ten minutes of cooking is sufficient. It is easy to overcook brussel sprouts and make them soft and unpalatable. Drain thoroughly. In meantime, prepare white sauce of butter, flour, salt, pepper and diluted milk. Pour sauce over sprouts and serve at once. Yield: 5 servings.

Buttered Kohlrabi
1 qt. kohlrabi 2 tsp. butter
1 1/2 tsp. salt 1/2 dash pepper
1 qt. boiling water
Wash, peel and cut kohlrabi into slices. Cook in salted water in an open kettle until tender. Drain and add butter. If salt pork is boiled until almost tender and kohlrabi is then added and cooked until tender it is a good way of making this vegetable appealing in flavor. Yield: 6 servings.

HOOVER'S ADDRESS

hope that a way will yet be found for the United States to fully subscribe to the world court.

He recognized American aversion to the league of nations by observing that "our people have determined that we should make no political entanglements such as membership in the league of nations."

RE-ASSURES BUSINESS

To American business he spoke reassuring words. The policy of his administration, he said, will be to let business alone. The election, he observed, "has again confirmed the determination of the American people that regulation and not government ownership is the course rightly to be pursued."

"The larger purpose of our economic thought," he declared, "should be to establish more firmly stability and security of business and employment and thereby remove poverty still further from our borders."

MANDATES DRAWN

From the election that elevated him to his high office, the new president drew numerous "mandates." Some of these he conceived to be:

"The continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community.

"The more effective reorganization of the federal government.

These, he said, constitute "the more tangible determination" of the election, but beyond them was the confidence of the people that we would not neglect the embedded ideals and aspirations of America, which he enumerated to include equality of opportunity, freedom of public opinion, integrity in public affairs, the perfection of justice, the strengthening of the home, and denial of class domination.

HAS NO FEARS

"In the presence of my countrymen, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, knowing what the task means and the responsibility which it involves, I beg your tolerance, your aid and your cooperation. I ask the help of Almighty God in this service to my country to which you have called me."

Blasphemy Unlawful

Generally speaking, blasphemy is the expression of defiant impiety and irreverence against God or things held sacred. In United States law it is an indictable offense, which consists of wantonly and maliciously reviling God and the Christian religion.

they crossed over in numerous crowds to Georgetown (in Maryland) where they surrendered him over to the arms of an affectionate sister state. In compliance with their wishes he partook with them of an early dinner prepared at Mr. Wise's tavern.

ANOTHER CHRONICLE

"Georgetown — Last Thursday there passed through this town on his way to New York, the Most Illustrious the President of the United States. His Excellency arrived at about 2 o'clock on the banks of the Potomack, escorted by a respectable corps of gentlemen. A large crowd of their grateful fellow citizens beheld their Fabius in the evening of his days, bid adieu to peaceful retreat at Mt. Vernon in order to save his country once more from confusion and anarchy."

They dined at Mr. Spurrier's tavern.

He got to Baltimore too late for dinner, but was met with cannon and after partaking of a supper retired a little after ten o'clock."

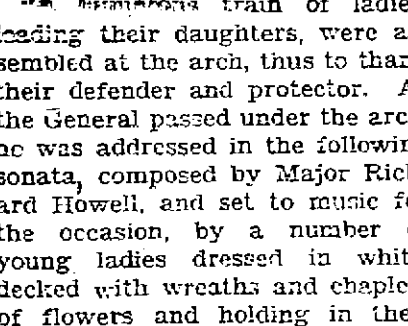

All along the line it was the same. Wilmington, Philadelphia, Trenton, Princeton, New Brunswick, Elizabeth Town. Everywhere plaudits, adoration and confidence.

At Trenton where Washington twice circumvented the British, there was a triumphal Arch, and one of the newspaper accounts of that event said:

TRENTON TRIBUTE

A historical train of ladies, leading their daughters, were assembled at the arch, thus to thank their defender and protector. As the General passed under the arch, he was addressed in the following sonata, composed by Major Richard Howell, and set to music for the occasion, by a number of young ladies dressed in white, decked with wreaths and chaplets of flowers and holding in their

Families capable of being welcomed into any home circle, be it rich or poor, are indeed rare, so folks, meet the Cole Family! Here is an unusual family with whom every housewife should become acquainted and which should have entree into every home.

The growing popularity of this family is due to the fact that its various members are rich in vitamins, minerals and other substances necessary for a balanced diet.

Yes, you've guessed it! The Cole Family belongs to the Vegetable Kingdom and its principal members are cabbage, cauliflower, broccoli, kale and brussels sprouts. The home-maker with an eye to the health of her household and a desire for variety will find the following recipes for preparing these succulent vegetables both tempting and wholesome.

Milk is a valuable adjunct in the preparation of these recipes. Evaporated milk is preferred because of its superior flavor, low water content and richness in health building vitamins. It is particularly rich in butterfat which accounts for the remarkable flavor it imparts.

Baked Cauliflower
1 medium cauliflower
1 tsp. salt
1 1/2 cups thin white sauce
1/2 cup grated cheese
Remove leaves and cut stalk from cauliflower. Soak in a solution of 1 tsp. vinegar, 1 tsp. salt and 1 quart of water, 15 minutes, to remove dirt and insects. Cook whole, stem up, in boiling water, to which salt has been added, 7 minutes. Put cauliflower in an oiled baking dish. Add white sauce. Cover top with grated cheese and brown in medium oven (370°F.). Yield: 5 servings.

Escalloped Cabbage
1 small head cabbage
1 tsp. salt
1 1/2 cups thin white sauce
1/2 cup crisp bacon chips
1/2 green pepper, chopped
Cut the cabbage into eighths and cook in boiling salted water 8 minutes. Place a layer of boiled cabbage in an oiled baking dish, then white sauce, green pepper and cheese. Repeat. Sprinkle top with buttered crumbs and bacon chips and brown in a medium oven (375°F.). Yield: 5 servings.

Broccoli Au Gratin
3 cups cooked broccoli
1 tsp. butter
1 tsp. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper
1 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/2 cup water
1/2 cup mild cheese, grated

Broccoli resembles green cauliflower. Remove all dead leaves. Soak in slightly salted water to remove insects and dirt. Drop broccoli into boiling salted water. Have just enough water to cover. Cook rapidly in open kettle, until tender. Ten or fifteen minutes cooking should be quite sufficient to make it tender. Drain broccoli thoroughly and place in an oiled baking dish. Cover with white sauce made of butter, flour, salt, pepper and diluted milk. Sprinkle cheese over surface. Place in a moderate oven until cheese melts. Serve immediately. Yield: 5 servings.

Creamed Brussel Sprouts
1 quart Brussel sprouts
1 qt. boiling water
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. butter
1/2 lb. flour
1/2 tsp. salt
Pepper
1/2 cup evaporated milk diluted with 1/2 cup water
1/2 cup meat stock

Clean sprouts by removing outer imperfect leaves and cutting the stalk off close to head. Soak in cold water ten or fifteen minutes to remove insects and dirt. Cook rapidly in boiling salted water in an open kettle. From eight to ten minutes of cooking is sufficient. It is easy to overcook brussels sprouts, and make them soft and unpalatable. Drain thoroughly. In meantime, prepare white sauce of butter, flour, salt, pepper and diluted milk. Pour sauce over sprouts and serve at once. Yield: 5 servings.

Buttered Kohlrabi
1 qt. kohlrabi
1/2 tsp. salt
1 qt. boiling water
Wash, peel and cut kohlrabi into slices. Cook in salted water in an open kettle until tender. Drain and add butter. If salt pork is boiled until almost tender and kohlrabi is then added and cooked until tender it is a good way of making this vegetable appealing in flavor. Yield: 6 servings.

hope that a way will yet be found for the United States to fully subscribe to the world court.

He recognized American aversion to the league of nations by observing that "our people have determined that we should make no political entanglements such as membership in the league of nations."

For the benefit of those foreign governments that profess to doubt American good faith, he declared that this country seeks no territorial expansion, and no domination of other peoples, whether in this hemisphere or any other.

To American business he spoke reassuring words. The policy of his administration, he said, will be to let business alone. The election, he observed, "has again confirmed the determination of the American people that regulation and not government ownership is the course rightly to be pursued."

"The larger purpose of our economic thought," he declared, "should be to establish more firmly stability and security of business and employment and thereby remove poverty still further from our borders."

MANDATES DRAWN
From the election that elevated him to his high office, the new president drew numerous "mandates." Some of these he conceived to be:

"The maintenance of the integrity of the constitution.

"The vigorous enforcement of laws.

"The continued regulation of business to prevent domination in the community.

"The more effective reorganization of the federal government.

These, he said, constitute "the more tangible determination of the election, but beyond them was the confidence of the people that we would not neglect the embedded ideals and aspirations of America," which he enumerated to include equality of opportunity, freedom of public opinion, integrity in public affairs, the perfection of justice, the strengthening of the home, and denial of class domination.

"Our is a land rich in resources," he said, in conclusion, "stimulating in its glorious beauty, filled with millions of happy homes, blessed with comfort and opportunity.

"I have no fears for the future of our country. It is bright with hope.

"In the presence of my countrymen, mindful of the solemnity of this occasion, knowing what the task means and the responsibility which it involves, I beg your tolerance, your aid and your cooperation. I ask the help of Almighty God in this service to my country to which you have called me."

Blasphemy Unlawful

Generally speaking, blasphemy is the expression of defiant impiety and irreverence against God or things held sacred. In United States law it is an indictable offense, which consists of wantonly and maliciously reviling God and the Christian religion.

TIMES CHANGE

they crossed over in numerous crowds to Georgetown (in Maryland) where they surrendered him over to the arms of an affectionate sister state. In compliance with their wishes he partook with them of an early dinner prepared at Mr. Wise's tavern.

And Georgetown's chronicler, not to be outdone, had this to say: "Georgetown — Last Thursday there passed through this town on his way to New York, the Most Illustrious the President of the United States. His Excellency arrived at about 2 o'clock on the banks of the Potomack, escorted by a respectable corps of gentlemen. . . . A large crowd of their grateful fellow citizens beheld their Fabius in the evening of his days, bid adieu to peaceful retreat at Mt. Vernon in order to save his country once more from confusion and anarchy."

They dined "at Mr. Spurrier's tavern."

He got to Baltimore too late for dinner, but was met with cannon and after partaking of a supper retired a little after ten o'clock."

All along the line it was the same—Wilmington, Philadelphia, Trenton, Princeton, New Brunswick, Elizabeth Town. Everywhere plaudits, adoration and confidence.

At Trenton where Washington twice circumvented the British, there was a triumphal Arch, and one of the newspaper accounts of that event said:

TRENTON TRIBUTE

A magnificent train of ladies, leading their daughters, were assembled at the arch, thus to thank their defender and protector. As the General passed under the arch, he was addressed in the following sonata, composed by Major Richard Howell, and set to music for the occasion, by a number of young ladies dressed in white, decked with wreaths and chaplets of flowers and holding in their

Virgins fair and matrons grave, Those they conquering arms did save, Build for thee triumphal bowers Stew, ye fair, his way with flowers— Strew your hero's way with flowers.

"As they sung these lines, they strewed the flowers before the General.

"When his Excellency came opposite the little female band, he honored the ladies by stopping until the sonata was finished. The scene was truly grand—universal silence prevailed—nothing was to be heard but the sweet notes of the songsters—and the mingled sentiments which crowded into the mind in the moments of solemn silence during the song, bathed many cheeks with tears."

FAMED SCOUT TO GET LAST WISH

"Yellowstone Kelly" to Be Buried in Boot Hill Cemetery at Billings.

This desire to be buried in a famous early day cemetery again calls attention to one of the unique cemeteries of the country. It is an institution having a peculiar fascination for pioneers of the Northwest. The person above referred to was found in the last moments of a "Yellowstone" Kelly, whose death recently occurred in Paradise, Calif., at the age of seventy-nine years and who was one of the most famous Indian scouts known to the history of the West.

Boot Hill cemetery derived its name from the fact that every person originally buried there died with his boots on. It was established in 1873, before the city of Billings was founded upon the construction of the Northern Pacific railroad, and the motivating cause was the need for burial grounds for characters who suddenly snapped out of an earthly existence in and out of the town of Custer, later the town terminus of the line. Later, Billings was created as a municipality and Custer, one mile east, became a ghost city.

"Yellowstone" Kelly was well acquainted with the underlying reason for the establishment of the cemetery, which, it is estimated, has a population of about forty bodies. Because of the historic incidents attaching to the cemetery, I. D. O'Donnell of Billings sponsored a movement providing for the fencing of this cemetery as well as the erection of a monument. Tombstones were not used in the cemetery, piles of stone serving as markers. The monument is of round boulders and stands about thirty feet high.

To bury Kelly on "Mountain." In order to perpetuate the name of "Yellowstone" Kelly, Mr. O'Donnell secured a small tract across the highway from the cemetery proper and named it Kelly mountain. Mr. Kelly's body will be buried there in the spring.

An interesting story is told involving "Yellowstone" Kelly and "Liver-Eating" Johnson, another early day character of eastern Montana. Johnson gained the rather blood-curdling appellation from the fact that he was said to have persuaded to eat the liver of an Indian victim, following a skirmish to impress the captive Redskins with his ferocity.

It seems that Kelly and Johnson were caught by a band of marauding Indians, and to save their lives decided to "ride it out." They mounted their steeds and made a run for it, being outnumbered to such a degree that a fight meant suicide. The Indians began a bombardment with both arrows and bullets, and the situation was critical.

Kelly had a better horse than Johnson, but both managed to escape the missiles. The race continued however, with Kelly gaining ground and Johnson barely holding his own. Kelly looked back and sought to spur Johnson to greater activity.

"Come on Johnson!" he yelled. "If you don't speed up they'll get you."

Johnson retorted: "You don't think I'm trying to throw the race, do you?"

The Billings Commercial club has in charge the arrangements for the funeral of "Yellowstone," whose name was Luther Sage Kelly. Friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt and Gen. Nelson A. Miles, the old scout lived his last days in California, in memories of a career such as comes to few men.

A native of Geneva, N. Y., Kelly gained fame as one of the greatest Indian scouts in history while he was with General Miles, but his exciting experiences were not confined to this period. Two Alaskan expeditions found him a member. He saw service in the Philippine insurrection, and later was principal trainer of Sergio and was acting governor there when a contingent of insurgents kept him and a few companions surrounded for more than a year.

Fired a bullet through when he saw his former platoon marching as he lay on his back at the head of a platoon. Kelly took advantage of a few days' vacation from scout to seek admission into the army. He was under age at 17, but he was accepted. He fought and finally was successful through the efforts of a friendly sergeant. He was a private and then a corporal in Company C, Tenth United States Infantry, stationed near Fort Huachuca, in Arizona. He was discharged in 1898 following service at Fort Huachuca, Fort Ransom and Fort Wedgworth.

Braves Rampaging Sioux. The next seven years proved the most adventurous of Kelly's life. It was in this period that he became known as a scout for the best frontiers, scouts and Indian scouts. As a scout, Kelly was a private and then a corporal in Company C, Tenth United States Infantry, stationed near Fort Huachuca, in Arizona. He was discharged in 1898 following service at Fort Huachuca, Fort Ransom and Fort Wedgworth.

REJOICES OVER HEALING POWER OF NEW KONJOLA

Gives Voluntary Endorsement After This Remedy Triumphs Over Years of Suffering.

MR. C. HOLP.

"Why suffer continual agony when such a wonderful relief is so near at hand," said Mr. C. Holp, 310 Marion Avenue, Painesville, Ohio.

"I am 67 years of age and have suffered the ailments heart to humanity. Gas and bloating in my stomach caused by indigestion and fermentation of food caused untold agony. Spitting up bits of food and sour water and that hot gas was almost unendurable. My kidneys were affected which compelled me to rise several times in the night. I would also suffer pain in my bowels and blood."

"It does not seem possible there is a remedy at hand that can give such wonderful relief as Konjola. I have only taken two bottles and I can hardly believe the results. I can eat my meals with enjoyment and my kidney trouble does not bother me any more. Friends and strangers, who are suffering those agonizing distresses, heed my message and do not hesitate to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity and give Konjola a good trial. Oh, how it renovates your liver and puts new life and pep in you, more than you can expect."

Konjola is sold in Circleville, Ohio, at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

Fellowship of Prayer

Daily Lenten Devotion
Prepared by Rev. Clarence H. Wilson D.D., for Commission on Evangelism of Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America

Topic
"LENT AND MY CHURCH"

Memory Verse for Monday.

"I exhort therefore, that, first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions—be made for all that are in authority" (1 Timothy 2:1).

MEDITATION: Today a new president of my country is inaugurated. Whether I voted for him or not, he is now my president. As such he is entitled to my loyal respect, and to my humble prayers for divine guidance and support to be given him. Let me not forget this as a part of the duty of the Christian citizen.

PRAYER: Almighty God Ruler of all nations, Judge of all men, we humbly beseech Thy blessing upon him who has been called by the voice of the people to be the chief magistrate of our beloved country. Endure him with wisdom and with the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom. Let the spirit which was in Jesus Christ reign in his heart that in righteousness and in charity he may rule over us. Guide him in the way of justice that we and all nations may have peace. In the name of Him who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Amen.

COLDS MAY DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

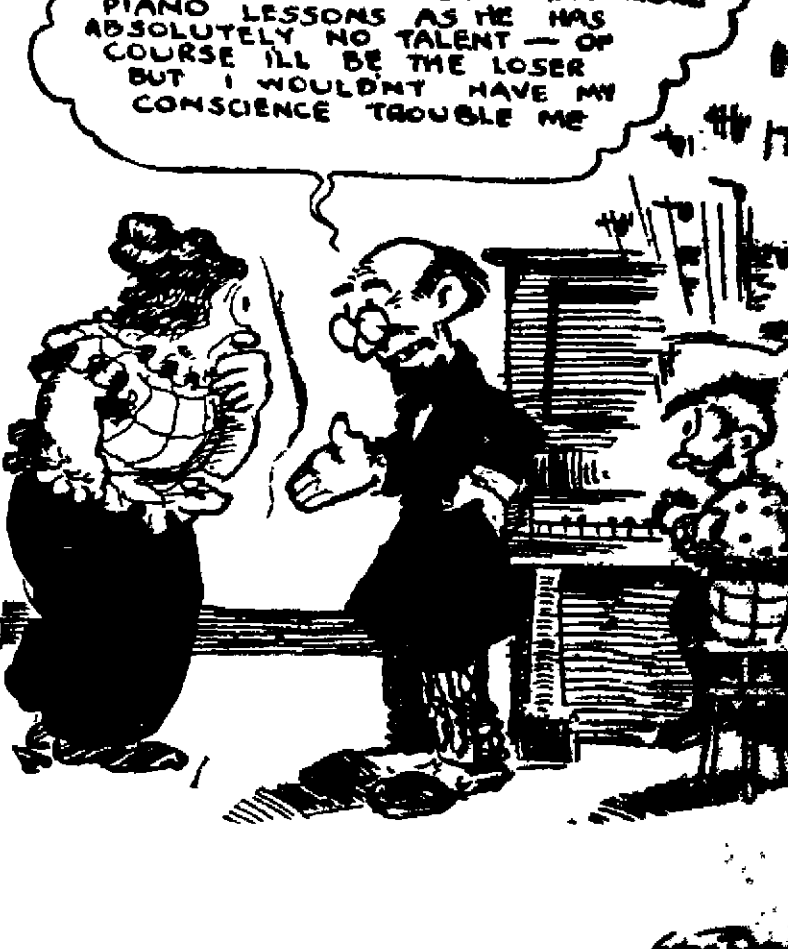

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croscote, that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs croscote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croscote, other healing elements which soothe inflamed membranes, while the dissolved croscote, in its blood, attacks the germ of colds, bronchitis and other bronchial irritations, and for building up the system or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

CONTACT WITH THE BUYERS

The problem of any business is how to reach the people who want and can use and have money to pay for the goods provided by that business. If the goods are all right, there are always plenty of people who would like the goods and could afford to buy them, but many business concerns do not succeed in getting in touch with these possible buyers, or enough of them to make the business pay. The mass of the buying public might just as well be in China, for all the good they do these concerns.

A retail store, therefore, needs some method of making contact with these possible buyers. A good looking store window is one such way. But only a small portion of the goods shown in that store can be displayed in the store window. And the majority of the people who pass the place never look into the window, and only a small portion of the population of a town will be likely to pass the window at all.

Some more intimate means of contact is needed. Newspaper advertising furnishes that point of contact. Everyone reads the home newspaper. If a concern advertises consistently, people are bound to see and read those advertisements.

They become familiar with the name, location, and stock carried by that store. They are impressed with the idea that that concern is wide awake and enterprising and that it is desirable, substantial and stylish lines of goods. Thus a contact between the store and everyone in the community is created.

By a natural law of psychology, when people want something in that line, their minds are impressed by the contact that store has already made with their consciousness. They usually head direct for an advertised store to supply this want.

Speaking of Strikes

By RING LARDNER

To the Editor:
I made the remark the other day that I wished I was in some sort of a strike and the madam said well why don't you get into one and I said how can I strike when I haven't got no job answer me that which for once she would not. Well, afterwards I got to thinking it over and finally I saw a way to get into the game that was by organizing a husbands union and demanding a fair trial for the married men. I talked it over with a couple of other husbands whom I'm on friendly terms with them and we set down and figured out a set of demands which will first be given to other husbands for their O. K. and then presented to the wives in the shape of a ultimatum which if each and every demand is not granted the married men will walk out on them the day before Xmas and leave them to explain to the kids why Santa didn't show up.

The demands as mapped out is as follows:

1. A 20 hour Day and a 6 Day Week.

Under the present system the husband is on the job the whole 24 hrs. of the whole 7 days and even while he is asleep he can't dream nothing that don't remind him of it. The husband wants the hrs. between 8 and 12 every night for rest and recreation, and Sundays to himself for meditation and prayer somewhere away from the home.

2. The Closed Mouth.

The way it is now you don't know sooner get in the house when the owner wants to know where you was. The husband wants the right to not answer.

3. A Increase of at Least 50 Per Cent in Pocket Money.

The owners is getting bigger allowances than ever before but the husbands is still supposed to go along on the old scale though it costs 3 and 5 times as much to mingle around and where a person used to be able to get paralyzed on $10 it now takes $25 and $30 to even feel like you wanted to hear the Rosary.

4. Collective Marketing.

In rare cases, the owner consults the husband as to what would be like for dinner but they generally always wait until just after breakfast when the bare mention of food stuffs rubs the fur the wrong way and even when a husband can remember 1 of his favorite dishes at that hr. in the morning and mentions it out loud why he has his trouble for his pains you might say, as the matter will either be forgotten and hushed up before nightfall or else they tried to get it but the man at the store advised them to pass it up as it will be a little rained at this time of yr. or something.

In regards to Demand #4, white I don't like to drag in personalities however, I feel strained to say that I have been a husband for better or worse than 8 yrs. and have never kept it a secret from the owner that my 2 favorite viands was oyster cream stew and doughnuts and yet during the entire Eight Years War the no. of messes of doughnuts in our home has hardly ran into double figures of 1 thumb. In the case of the doughnuts it is generally always brought up that that lard is too expensive for lardners or doughnuts don't set good on the kids or the owner don't seem to be no way of finding out and if you get them from the bakery you don't know what is in them though personally I don't give a darn as long as they taste great and fill you up.

As far as oysters is concerned there's a version in the Psalms that says don't eat them only in months which is spelt with a r and though it goes vs. the grain for a man to speak of their wives shortcomings suffices to say that they's many a nice girl that was born a bad speller and just as many that can't bear the looks of a calendar around the house so far all as they know oysters may be at their zenith in July instead of vice versa.

5. The Abolition of Birthdays.

The normal husband has as many birthdays per annum as the owner but where as the husband is expected to remember the 10 of July or what ever it is and spend the equal of half a yrs. gold dues where as on the other hand the owner if they don't forget the 6 of March entirely why they buy you a book that until you have read it through you can set around evenings and pore your finger nails.

That is the demands as they will be presented to the owners as soon as the husbands can get organized and I hope, dear editor, that you are in sympathy with this movement and will urge all the husbands on your staff as those amongst your subscribers to at once join the Amalgamated Married Men of America and put a end to the humiliations to which a member of the servile sex becomes a party to the minute they are drug up to the harmonical alter and if a walk out is necessary on the date chose which is Xmas eve why I hope the owners will see the light and bow to the inevitable and not try and continue in business with a gang of scabs.

Fishing by Electricity

Electricity is used to catch fish in parts of Germany. One copper cable is laid at the bottom of the water to be fished, and the other held near the surface by floats. An electric current passes through the cables, and all the fish in the neighborhood are painlessly electrocuted.

Catch Sardines at Night

Night is the best time for sardine fishing, for it is then easier to locate the fish. In swimming through the water they disturb myriads of microscopic organisms which glow like fireflies and so enable the fisherman to detect the presence of their prize.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

"MARCH FORTH"

Impatient Griselda

by Dorothy Scarborough

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

IRENE ROBELINE married Guinn Holden, young and handsome Texas minister, shortly after Lilith, his first wife, died, leaving an infant Lilith. Irene, secretly in love with Guinn, had seen him practically snatched away by the beautiful blonde and coquettish Lilith, who had boasted of her ability to make Guinn propose to her. Instead of the love that Irene expected to enjoy to complete her happiness, she found always the unseen barrier of the dead Lilith haunting Holden's mind and enthroned in his heart. He spoiled the child, granting her every wish and fancy. Even when Irene's child came he referred to her as "Lilith's little sister." This was Tina, who grows up a dark-eyed, lovely child, sweet and thoughtful, but conscious of her secondary position to the beautiful Lilith in her father's heart. Irene ponders this poignant problem that has persisted during the years of marriage to Holden. Even Ross and Lundy, the boys, and little Patricia, the youngest, were similarly regarded by their father. How to supplant this "golden ghost" of the glorious dead Lilith was made doubly difficult because of the grown-up Lilith, who had not only her mother's beauty, but greater intellect to support her selfish desires and strengthen her hold on her father's affection. Graduated from college, Lilith tells her father she wishes to study voice in New York. Tina, too, wants to pursue an art course. "Lilith is the older," the father would reply when Irene remonstrated. "Lilith is the favorite of Will Lundy, town doctor, who had been in love with Irene. Tina, hurt when Lilith doesn't want her at Roger Deveraux's house party, returns to Summer school. Lilith announces her engagement to Roger. Young Dan Ripley, away eight years, is present at the announcement party.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIX.

A DAY or two later Miss Malvina's will was read, a document which a lawyer had drawn up and kept through all the vagaries of her own home-made testaments, which it appears she had herself destroyed. She had left Guinn and Irene $2,000 each, with certain restrictions.

"This money is not to be spent in any way for church or religious or charitable activities. It is pleasure money. I hope that it may be spent foolishly, for something that will bring the legatees personal enjoyment."

The legatees were touched and grateful.

"Poor old nutcracker," said Rosa. "She wasn't half as cuckoo as I thought. I sure am glad she saved the church, or this money would go glimmering."

"Pleasure money," mused Lilith, with a dreamy look in her eyes.

"Now, Lil, don't you be planning to grab this for your trousseau!" snapped Rosa.

"No, I'm not," she said.

Tina spoke, looking at her father and mother. "Now you two parents can take that trip to the Holy Land that you've always wanted. I'll be home next Summer and can take care of the house."

Irene's eyes glistened with tears. "I think she was as devoted to you, Guinn, as any member in our church. I wish I'd been more patient in my thoughts of her."

"You might have made a few more thousand codicils," jeered Rosa.

She sighed. "Well, it will be a comfort to have a little money in the bank."

"Pleasure money, for foolishness," Tina sternly reminded her. She twined her father's ear. "You could buy a new car, a good one, only that would be for the family and the church as much as for you, and Miss Malvina mightn't approve. She wanted you to spend that all on your two selves."

"Well, we don't have to decide today, do we?" said Irene comfortably. "The will doesn't say if the money isn't squandered in twenty-four hours the legatees will have to be divorced. I can spend my part of that money in a thousand ways, just by thinking about it in the bank."

"You can spend the interest on us, Moth, can't you?" asked Lundy anxiously.

"Personal pleasure," Rosa reminded him with firmness. "We'll allow no selfishness in this matter. I want to see you two turn loose and be recklessly extravagant for yourselves once in life. I take my hat off to Miss Malvina."

"She left a letter for us," Guinn went on. "She said: 'I've always wanted to do something that would make life easier and happier for my pastor and his wife.'"

"She must have stunted herself being engaged to him. But I want a year to see for sure."

His look expressed vast relief. "All right, that suits me to the ground. But stay here at home with me instead of going to New York."

The blue eyes filled with tears. "I'm bored sick with this place! Not with you, Father, but with this poky little town. What is there here for me? Just to sing in the choir and go to a dozen church services a week?"

"I don't recall that you ever did that," he said with humorous indulgence.

"I'll be driven to it if I have to stay here. I want to get away, to find myself, and I don't want to marry just to get a ticket to Europe!"

Her cheeks were flushed, her eyes eager, appealing, as she tucked her hand inside his arm.

"Of course not. You mustn't marry for any reason in the world but love," he said emphatically.

"Then give me a year to study singing, and at the end of that time I'll know whether I love Roger or not."

"Times are pretty tight, and my salary's small, you know," he answered with a doubtful tightening of his lips.

She gave his arm an affectionate squeeze. "Yes, I know, and I've been a frightful expense to you. I wouldn't have said a word about this, if it hadn't been for Miss Malvina's two thousand."

"I see," he said thoughtfully. "I can study voice and have a wonderful year in New York, and then if I marry Roger, I can know it's because I love him. If I don't, then I can turn to something else, make my living in some way."

He chuckled as he glanced down at her. Might as well expect a fluff of thistledown or a canary bird to hold a job and make its living as a girl like Lilith! When every man that laid eyes on her wanted to marry her!

"But you're so young and inexperienced, and New York is full of temptations."

"Oh, don't be the heavy father in melodrama! I've always known how to take care of myself, and besides I'll be with Mrs. Dean and Ellen."

His look was sobered. "I'll think it over."

"No, dearest, promise me now," she implored. "If you go home and talk it over with Mother, she'll throw ice water on the plan. This is just between you and me, because I'm your daughter."

"She has been a good mother to you, Lilith," he said gravely.

"I know, I know. But, Father, don't you ever think that I'd like to do some things in the way my own mother would have liked?"

He was silent, his lips pressed tightly together.

"And I want to do this more than anything in the world. After I'm married it will be too late, for I'll not be free then." She spoke softly, coaxingly. "It would give you pleasure, wouldn't it, to let me live as a girl like Lilith! When you please, wouldn't it, to let me be perfectly happy for one year?"

"I'd give my life to make you happy, if that were necessary," he said unthinkingly.

You foolish father—only two thousand dollars. And maybe some day I can pay that back to you a hundredfold."

He gave a heavy sigh, unable to resist her cajoling. "I doubt the wisdom of this, Lilith—but if you have your heart set on it, I won't refuse you."

She kissed him happily. "Oh, Father, I'm so happy! And you won't let anyone make you take back your promise to me, will you?"

"No."

Maybe this was folly, he told himself. Maybe he was weak to give her his word, but he'd let her have her will this time. It was only a year, only two thousand dollars, and she was his heart's beloved, his dead Lilith's daughter.

Kiddies' Evening Story

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

DEXTER KNOWS

"Well," said Babe, "I've been in the circus business for years and years."

"We are the members of a very big, three-ringed circus, and we travel to big cities as well as to small towns."

In the cities Babe led the way through the streets down to the circus buildings. She also would lead the way from one small place to another if the distance was not so very great.

"I am the leader of the great parade," Babe said.

Babe was the biggest elephant belonging to the circus.

"It seems to me," Babe continued, "that every single man, woman and child in the whole world has seen my tricks."

"They have seen us all put our front feet upon each other and stand over the keeper who lies flat upon the ground."

"The people hold their breath and say: 'How does that man dare do that? Suppose that an elephant should step on him!'"

"Of course we would never do that. We know better than that."

"Well, what I often wonder is, how we always have so many people who want to see us."

"I have performed for so long that it seems as though every one must know my tricks by heart, and yet they still want to see them."

"We have done our tricks over and over again, beautiful ladies have ridden bareback on white horses, bears have ridden bicycles or skated on roller skates, clowns have cracked jokes and laughed and gone around with painted faces."

"Girls and men have swung way up in the air on trapezes, ladies have walked along narrow ropes, carrying parasols. Men have swung by their hair, ladies by their teeth."

"Some folks have sung, others have worn snakes, some have ridden in chariots."

"Yes, all sorts of tricks have been performed and as long as I can remember elephants have always been part of the circus, and I have a good memory, as all elephants have!"

"But still—there is a great circus secret. Dexter told it to me."

"Dexter, friend Elephants, is the most important man with this circus. He just knows everything."

"He told me the secret, and I will tell it to the rest of you elephants."

"They all waved their trunks and listened."

"He said that from the moment there was a sound of a circus people were excited and happy."

"The sound of the band—the sight of an elephant—the glimpse of a circus wagon or car—anything that had to do with a circus always makes people happy."

"So whether we do our same tricks over and over again will never matter."

"We belong to the circus, and that is enough. Dexter has always loved the circus and yet he knows all about it and has been with it for years."

"It is the great secret that belongs to a circus. It is all part of a circus."

"And the great secret is that the word circus and all it means just stands for joy and excitement and happiness with almost every one in the world."

"Dexter says so, and he knows. And we love the circus, too. We wouldn't be happy away from it."

THEATRES

"POOR GIRLS"

Dorothy Revier and Edmund Burns are starred in "Poor Girls" at the Grand theater tonight. It is the story of a girl's plucky fight against poverty and environment and her choice of three roads to her goal—a rich husband, hard work or the life of fortune's favorite. A Universal comedy also will be shown.

Anne Nichol's "Abie's Irish Rose," great and poignant story that it is, came to the Metropolitan theater yesterday, and showed all evidence of scoring a tremendous success, even greater, possibly, than the original play itself.

"Abie's Irish Rose" teaches us that love can conquer all racial misunderstanding, and that bigotry and the jealousy of creeds is all wrong. Never before has such a stirring tale so beautifully told been presented on a local silver sheet, but the picture does not preach; it amuses and entertains.

Jean Hersholt's performance is that of a master, to put it lightly. Once again has this actor scored in a role that he makes outstanding, that of Solomon Levy, the Jewish father who objects to his son's marriage to an Irish girl, Rosemary Murphy. Charles Rogers, whose splendid work in "Wings," "My Best Girl," "Get Your Man" and others is well remembered, excels as Abie and Nancy Carroll shows herself to be typically Irish as Rosemary. J. Farrell MacDonald is the father of the girl, Patrick Murphy. The comedy roles are in the hands of Bernard Gorcey and Ida Kramer, who, as Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Cohen, have carried their parts from the stage to the screen.

MOST BEAUTIFUL GIRLS

"Glorifying the world's most beautiful girls" was the original idea of James A. Carrier, director general of the International Beauties, when he sailed for European countries a few months ago, to select one representative beauty of every country across the sea. The winners of these various European countries recently arrive in the United States and their appearance in the eastern cities during the past few weeks have caused not less than a sensation. These same prize winning beauties, surrounded with much talent, will be the feature stage attraction at the Cliftona theater Tuesday and Wednesday. "Miss Russia," "Miss Poland," "Miss Spain," "Miss France," "Miss Belgium," "Miss Austria," "Miss Germany," "Miss England," "Miss Paris," "Miss London" and "Miss U. S. A." will not alone display the latest gowns, lingerie and bathing suit creations, but they will speak to the audience in their native tongue, bringing a special message of "good will" to the people of their homeland who are now residents of the United States.

FAMED SCOUT TO GET LAST WISH

"Yellowstone Kelly" to Be Buried in Boot Hill Cemetery at Billings.

This codicil to the will of a famous early day character again calls attention to one of the unique cemeteries of the country. It is an institution having a peculiar fascination for pioneers of the Northwest. The provision above referred to was found in the last testament of "Yellowstone" Kelly, whose death recently occurred in Paradise, Cal., at the age of seventy-nine years, and who was one of the most famous Indian scouts known to the history of the West.

Boot Hill cemetery sits its name from the fact that every person originally buried there died with his boots on. It was established in 1870, before the city of Billings was founded upon the construction of the Northern Pacific railroad, and the motivating cause was the need for burial grounds for characters who suddenly snuffed out of an earthly existence in and near the town of Condon, later the western terminus of the line. Later Billings was created as a municipality and Condon, one mile east, became a ghost city.

"Yellowstone" Kelly was well acquainted with the underlying reason for the establishment of the cemetery, which, it is estimated, has a population of about forty bodies. Because of the historic incidents attaching to the cemetery, L. D. O'Donnell of Billings sponsored a movement providing for the fencing of this cemetery as well as the erection of a monument. Tombstones were not used in the burials, piles of stone serving as markers. The monument is of round boulders and stands about thirty feet high.

To Bury Kelly on "Mountain." In order to perpetuate the name of "Yellowstone" Kelly, Mr. O'Donnell secured a small tract across the highway from the cemetery proper and named it Kelly mountain. Mr. Kelly's body will be buried there in the spring.

An interesting story is told involving "Yellowstone" Kelly and "Liver-Eating" Johnson, another early day character of eastern Montana. Johnson gained the rather blood-curdling appellation from the fact that he was said to have pretended to eat the liver of an Indian victim, following a skirmish, to impress the captive redskins with his ferocity.

It seems that Kelly and Johnson were caught by a band of marauding Indians, and to save their lives decided to "ride it out." They mounted their steeds and made a run for it, being outnumbered to such a degree that a fight meant suicide. The Indians began a bombardment with both arrows and bullets, and the situation was critical indeed.

Kelly had a better horse than Johnson, but both managed to escape the missiles. The race continued, however, with Kelly gaining ground and Johnson barely holding his own. Kelly looked back and sought to spur Johnson to greater activity.

"Come on, Johnson!" he yelled. "If you don't speed up they'll get you." Johnson retorted: "You don't think I'm trying to throw the race, do you?"

White Men Win Out. The superiority of their mounts finally told, and they rode to safety after one of the closest calls either had ever experienced.

The Billings Commercial club has in charge the arrangements for the funeral of "Yellowstone," whose name was Luther Sage Kelly. Friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt and Gen. Nelson A. Miles, the old scout lived his last days in California, in memories of a career such as comes to few men.

A native of Geneva, N. Y., Kelly gained fame as one of the greatest Indian scouts in history while he was with General Miles, but his exciting experiences were not confined to this period. Two Alaskan expeditions found him a member. He saw service in the Philippine insurrection, and later was provincial treasurer of Sarango and was acting governor there when a contingent of insurgents kept him and a few companions surrounded for more than a year.

Fired with patriotism when he saw his former playmates marching as drummer boys at the head of a Union regiment, Kelly took advantage of a few days' vacation from school to seek admission into the army. He was under age and was rejected. But he continued, and finally was successful through the efforts of a friendly sergeant. He was a private, and then a corporal, in Company G, Tenth United States Infantry, stationed near Richmond, to guard prisoners. He was discharged in 1898 following service at Fort Ripley, Minn.; Fort Ransom and Fort Wadsworth.

Braves Ramping Sioux.

The next seven years proved the most adventurous of Kelly's life, and it was in this period that he became known as one of the greatest hunters, trappers and Indian scouts. Against the protestations of Montana miners, who ridiculed his plan, Kelly started alone to cross the Missouri on a hunting expedition, facing the dangers of warring Sioux. After an exciting experience with a war party of Sitting Bull's Sioux, he arrived at Fort Berthold, in the heart of a hostile Indian country. Here Mandan, Gros Ventre and Arikara tribes banded together for protection against the Sioux.

The following winter Kelly went

MR. C. HOLP.

"Why suffer continual agony when such a wonderful relief is so near at hand," said Mr. C. Holp, 310 Marion Avenue, Painesville, Ohio.

"I am 67 years of age and have suffered the ailments heir to humanity. Gas and bloating in my stomach caused by indigestion and fermentation of food caused untold agony. Spitting up bits of food and sour water and that hot gas was almost unendurable. My kidneys were affected which compelled me to rise several times in the night. I would also suffer pains in my bowels and blood.

"It does not seem possible there is a remedy at hand that can give such wonderful relief as Konjola. I have only taken two bottles and I can hardly believe the results. I can eat my meals with enjoyment and my kidney trouble does not bother me any more. Friends and strangers, you who are suffering those agonizing distresses, heed my message and do not hesitate to take advantage of this wonderful opportunity and give Konjola a good trial. Oh, how it renovates your liver and puts new life and pep in you, more than you can expect."

Konjola is sold in Circleville, Ohio, at Hamilton & Ryan's drug store, and by all the best druggists in all towns throughout this entire section.

"LENT AND MY CHURCH"

Memory Verse for Monday.

MEDITATION: Today a new president of my country is inaugurated. Whether I voted for him or not, he is now my president. As such he is entitled to my loyal respect, and to my humble prayers for divine guidance and support to be given him. Let me not forget this as a part of the duty of the Christian citizen.

PRAYER: Almighty God, Ruler of all nations, Judge of all men, we humbly beseech Thy blessing upon him who has been called by the voice of the people to be the chief magistrate of our beloved country. Endure him with wisdom and with the fear of the Lord which is the beginning of wisdom. Let the spirit which was in Jesus Christ reign in his heart that in righteousness and in charity he may rule over us. Guide him in the way of justice that we and all nations may have peace. In the name of Him who is King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Amen.

WATERING TROUGH AT BASIL PASSES

LANCASTER, O., March 4.—The last relic of the old horse and buggy days passed from the scene at Basil when a tractor motor hauled away the village watering trough that had stood at public square for 50 years. In recent months, the trough had not been used for its intended purpose but had gathered a choice assortment of tin cans.

However, the village pump, a companion piece to the trough was not disturbed and will continue to quench the thirst of those whose thirst goes no farther than H-2-O.

Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the germs and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Graphic Outlines of History

A common punishment of old New England was standing in the pillory. In those times men were punished for many refractory acts. For instance a drunkard had to wear a red D sewed on his coat or hung about his neck.

An organization that recognizes its duty to those whom it serves cannot help but gain wide-spread public confidence.

How to Play BRIDGE

Series 1928-29 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1928, by Wynne Ferguson

ARTICLE No. 31

There are many good Auction players throughout the United States, and every little community where Auction is played, usually has one or more outstanding players. These players have one quality in common, irrespective of the rest of their game, and that is the quality that enables them to play best under pressure, to rise to the occasion.

There is another quality, however, that few, even of the good players, possess and that is the ability to forget what has gone before and to concentrate on what is ahead. You may have the science of the game down to a nicety and the skill to play fine Auction but if you happen to have the kind of temperament that frets over bad breaks you never will make a fine player.

If you or your partner play one hand badly or if bad breaks develop, don't let it worry you. Pick up the next hand with an open mind; concentrate on the problems connected with its bidding and play. This cannot be accomplished to any advantage if you are thinking of the preceding hand, either in anger, regret or disappointment.

Learn to lose one hand at a time, not two or three or four, as many players do. They keep using over one bad hand in their minds and forget to pay attention to the hand they are then playing. As a result they allow one bad hand to rest them in addition to the one or more following hands to which they fail to give the proper attention.

Hearts—10, 9
Clubs—A, K, Q, J, 7, 6, 2 : A : Y
Diamonds—J, 2 : A : B
Spades—A, 4 : Z :

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no trump. A passed the no trump bid for, with eight set-up tricks and the lead, he would have been foolish to warn his opponents of their danger.

Y, however, bid two spades and B passed. Z had very good help for spades, so he bid three spades.

Here is where A rose to the occasion. Most players would have bid four clubs, but A was too good a player to do that. He bid three no trump, figuring that with a spade opening, and eight set-up tricks in his own hand, he might very well manage to scrape up another trick in some way and so score game and rubber.

On the other hand, no game in clubs was likely because of Z's no trump and Y's spade bid which indicated at least enough strength to prevent a game in clubs. As the three no trump bid offered a fair chance for game and the four club bid offered no chance for game, A wisely bid three no trump.

Y opened a spade and A made three no trump because his partner held the ace of hearts. His bold and clever bid was thus rewarded by a game and rubber that most players would have passed up. Be on the lookout for such opportunities and don't hesitate to take advantage of them when they show up.

In the preceding article, the proper opening lead was considered when partner had bid a suit. There are many occasions when the right lead has to be made without any indication from one's partner as to his hand. How often games could have been saved if the original lead had been different. Sometimes the tragedy happens even though the original lead is the correct one on the cards held. On the other hand, the first player, by a bad opening lead, often gives the Declarer that extra trick which he needs to make game.

It is sometimes said that playing the two hands is worth on the average one trick to the Declarer; perhaps the advantage is even greater. He in particular benefits from the fact that, of the 52 cards, he knows which 26 are against him and which 26 he holds in the two hands; whereas each opponent can see 13 cards in his own hand and 13 in Dummy, but is unaware how the other 26 lie. Beyond this, the opponents of the Declarer have a great disadvantage in the fact that one of them must lead "blind"; i. e., before seeing Dummy's hand he must play a card to the first trick.

The original lead, of course, differs according to whether the Declarer has a no-trump or suit contract. Let us first take the case where the Declarer has bid "One no-trump" and all have passed; or where the Declarer has said "One no-trump" and his partner, after a "No bid" from the first opponent, has said "Two no-trump"—a declaration often made nowadays in order to shut out an informally double from the fourth player. Your "blind" lead should, in the ordinary way, be the fourth best of your longest suit; i. e., if you hold hearts, K, 10, 7, 6, 4, you would lead the six. This rule, however, must not be followed if you hold "touching honors." For example, K, Q, J, 7, in hearts, is a case of three "touching honors," for the queen is next to the king and the jack next to the queen. In this case you lead the highest viz., the king. Again, if you hold K, Q, 10, 7, you should lead the king. The reason is that the Declarer may hold A, J, 6; if he wins your king with the ace, your partner afterwards can lead through him, and you will catch his jack.

Let us come to another type of hand. You have no long suit, but you have two four-card suits. In this case, if one is a major suit (spades or hearts) and the other a minor suit (diamonds or clubs), lead the lowest of the major suit. For example, if your hand is spades, 9, 7; hearts, K, 9, 8, 6; diamonds, K, 8, 6, 3; clubs, A, Q, 6, 2, lead the six of hearts. The reason is that if the Declarer had held tops in a major suit he would bid it rather than no-trump; and if his partner were strong in it, he probably would have bid "Two"; so you are less likely to help the Declarer by leading your major suit.

But there are other situations which are infinite in their variety. Here is one: Z bid "One no-trump"; A said "Double"; Y bid "Two no trumps," and all passed. What should A lead, holding spades, 10, 8, 6, 3; hearts, A, Q, 6, 2; diamonds, A, K, 8, 4; clubs, J?

There is only one lead here, viz., the three of spades. A can reasonably hope to make four tricks, and he is all the more likely to make more if he keeps the Declarer guessing as to the cards in the red suits. The fact that Y bid "Two no trumps" over the double shows that neither Y nor Z is strong or long in spades. Let A therefore lead a spade and wait for developments.

The original lead against a suit bid will be considered in a later article.

NEW CABLE SERVICE FROM HERE ABROAD

A new week-end letter cable service was put in effect by the Western Union Telegraph Co. to Great Britain and Ireland Friday, March 1 by which a 100 word cable letter may be sent to points in these countries for five dollars from Circleville. The new service has been arranged by Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union, who is at present in London. "This new week-end letter service will be available from any point in this country," a statement issued by the company said, "the word rate from Circleville is five cents with a minimum charge for 100 words. Messages will be accepted as late in the week as midnight Saturday for delivery at opening of business Monday morning. The new service supplements present 20 word week-end letter and is an addition to the new 50 word overseas cable night letter which the Western Union inaugurated shortly after the first of the year.

Due to the increasing use of the cable by the general public both for commercial and social correspondences it was decided to give a service which permits lengthy week-end communications at a low rate. Furthermore this service does away with the necessity for employment of code or stilted language and permits still greater freedom of expression in cablegrams.

She Has Unusual Record of Service

Miss Irene Hawes

Twenty-five years in the same office—without missing a day, except during vacations.

Such is the record which will be marked this month by the presentation of a 25-year service emblem to Miss Irene Hawes, chief operator in Yellow Springs for The Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

Miss Hawes, who lives at 111 Center College street, Yellow Springs, is a native of the Blue Grass State, her birthplace being Hawesville, Kentucky, where she attended high school.

Her first job was as a clerk in her brother's store in Kentucky. Later she became secretary at the Methodist Home in Yellow Springs.

Miss Hawes' service in the telephone business began on the morning of November 17, 1903, the day on which the Yellow Springs exchange was opened. Since then, she has been on the job in the Yellow Springs office, rain or shine, without missing a day through illness or anything else.

"No matter how bad the weather might be, Miss Hawes always manages to reach the office," said R. D. Eyer, district commercial manager of the Telephone Company.

"Even the worst of blizzards could not keep her away," Miss Hawes has two hobbies—her work and her radio.

At the business session which proceeded the social time, Mrs. Orrin Dresbach, president of the organization, presided. An unusually large attendance rewarded the efforts of the pupils and their teachers. The splendid program which was partly patriotic, and which partly dealt with health subjects was received with genuine enthusiasm by the audience. The children had playlets, songs, papers and readings.

The teachers who had taken such pains with the work of the pupils were Miss Juanita McNeal, Miss Faye Wood and Miss Mildred Shaner.

Mrs. Lawrence Johnson of S. Pickaway-st. Circleville was in charge of the entire program. Miss Mary Radcliff of Williamsport, supervisor of music at the Pickaway school, assisted with music.

After this phase of the entertainment had come to a close, the success of the program was further assured by the parent teachers' orchestra which added a lively finale by playing several selections. The meeting was concluded after a tasty and bountiful lunch had been served by a committee.

The guests were invited to the dining room where they found their places at the table, artistically decorated with pink place cards, nut-cut favors, and a large birthday cake. The cake was frosted with white, and had 18 pink birthday candles alight, when the guests were seated. Spring flowers, that harmonized with the color scheme, were also used on the table. The birthday dinner was served in two courses.

Games and music were the gay pastimes of the evening, while the beautiful presents that the honor guest received were reminders of the date that was being celebrated. Graphic Outlines of History

STANDING IN THE PILLORY

A common punishment in old New England was standing in the pillory. In those times men were punished for many refractions of customs. For instance, a drunkard had to wear a red D sewed on his coat or hung about his neck.

An organization that recognizes its duty to those whom it serves cannot help but gain widespread public confidence.

Series 1928-29 by Wynne Ferguson

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

Copyright 1928, by J. J. J.

ARTICLE No. 31

There are many good Auction players throughout the United States, and every little community where Auction is played, usually has one or more outstanding players. These players have one quality in common, irrespective of the rest of their game, and that is the quality that enables them to play best under pressure, to rise to the occasion.

There is another quality, however, that few, even of the good players, possess and that is the ability to forget what has gone before and to concentrate on what is ahead. You may have the science of the game down to a nicety and the skill to play fine Auction but if you happen to have the kind of temperament that frets over bad breaks you never will make a fine player.

If you or your partner play one hand badly or, if bad breaks develop, don't let it worry you. Pick up the next hand with an open mind; concentrate on the problems connected with its bidding and play. This cannot be accomplished to any advantage if you are thinking of the preceding hand, either in anger, regret or disappointment.

Learn to lose one hand at a time, not two or three or four, as many players do. They keep "using over one bad hand in their mind and forget to pay attention to the hand they are then playing. As a result they allow one bad hand to cost them in addition the one or more following hands to which they fail to give the proper attention.

Clubs—A, K, Q, J, 7, 6, 2
Diamonds—J, 2
Spades—A, 4

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no trump. A passed the no trump bid, with eight set-up tricks and the lead, he would have been foolish to warn his opponents of their danger.

Y, however, bid two spades and B passed. Z had very good help for spades, so he bid three spades. Here is where A rose to the occasion. Most players would have bid four clubs, but A was too good a player to do that. He bid three no trump, figuring that with a spade opening and eight set-up tricks in his own hand, he might very well manage to scrape up another trick in some way and so score game and rubber. On the other hand, no game in clubs was likely because of Z's no trump and Y's spade bid which indicated at least enough strength to prevent a game in clubs. As the three no trump bid offered a fair chance for game and the four club bid offered no chance for game, A wisely bid three no trump.

Y opened a spade and A made three no trump because his partner held the ace of hearts. His bold and clever bid was thus rewarded by a game and rubber that most players would have passed up. Be on the lookout for such opportunities and don't hesitate to take advantage of them when they show up.

In the preceding article, the proper opening lead was considered when partner had bid a suit. There are many occasions when the original lead has to be made without any indication from the partner as to his hand. How often games could have been saved if the original lead had been different. Sometimes the tragedy happens even though the original lead is the correct one on the cards held. On the other hand, the first player, by a bad opening lead, often gives the Declarer that extra trick which he needs to make game.

It is sometimes said that playing the two hands is worth on the average one trick to the Declarer; perhaps the advantage is even greater. He in particular benefits from the fact that, of the 52 cards, he knows which 26 are against him and which 26 he holds in the two hands; whereas each opponent can see 13 cards in his own hand and 13 in Dummy, but is unaware how the other 26 lie. Beyond this, the opponents of the Declarer have a great disadvantage in the fact that one of them must lead "blind," i. e., before seeing Dummy's hand he must play a card to the first trick.

The original lead, of course, differs according to whether the Declarer has a no-trump or suit contract. Let us first take the case where the Declarer has bid "One no-trump" and all have passed; or where the Declarer has said "One no-trump" and his partner, after a "No bid" from the first opponent, has said "Two no-trump"—a declaration often made nowadays in order to shut out an informative double from the fourth player. Your "blind" lead should, in the ordinary way, be the fourth best of your longest suit; i. e., if you hold hearts, K, 10, 7, 6, 4, you would lead the six. This rule, however, must not be followed if you hold touching honors, or the queen's next to the king and the jack next to the queen. In this case you lead the highest; viz., the king. Again, if you hold K, Q, 10, 7, you should lead the king. The reason is that the Declarer may hold A, J, 6; if he wins your king with the ace, your partner afterwards can lead through him, and you will catch his jack.

Let us come to another type of hand. You have no long suit, but you have two four-card suits. In this case, if one is a major suit (spades or hearts) and the other a minor suit (diamonds or clubs), lead the lowest of the major suit. For example, if your hand is spades, 9, 7; hearts, K, 9, 8, 6; diamonds, K, 9, 8, 6; clubs, 10, 6, lead the six of hearts. The reason is that if the Declarer had held tops in a major suit he would bid it rather than no-trump; and if his partner were strong in it, he probably would have bid "Two"; so you are less likely to help the Declarer by leading your major suit.

But there are other situations which are infinite in their variety. Here is one: Z bid "One no-trump"; A said "Double"; Y bid "Two no trumps"; and all passed. What should A lead, holding spades, 10, 8, 6, 3; hearts, A, Q, 6, 2; diamonds, A, K, 8, 4; clubs, 10?

There is only one lead here, viz., the three of spades. A can reasonably hope to make four tricks, and he is all the more likely to make more if he keeps the Declarer guessing as to the cards in the red suits. The fact that Y bid "Two no trumps" over the double shows that neither Y nor Z is strong or long in spades. Let A therefore lead a spade and wait for developments.

A new week-end letter cable service was put in effect by the Western Union Telegraph Co. to Great Britain and Ireland Friday, March 1, by which a 100 word cable letter may be sent to points in these countries for five dollars from Circleville. The new service has been arranged by Newcomb Carlton, president of the Western Union, who is at present in London. "This new week-end letter service will be available from any point in this country," a statement issued by the company said, "the word rate from Circleville is five cents with a minimum charge for 100 words. Messages will be accepted as late in the week as midnight Saturday for delivery at opening of business Monday morning. The new service supplements present 20 word week-end letter and is an addition to the new 50 word overseas cable night letter which the Western Union inaugurated shortly after the first of the year.

Due to the increasing use of the cable by the general public both for commercial and social correspondences it was decided to give a service which permits lengthy week-end communications at a low rate. Furthermore this service does away with the necessity for employment of code or stilted language and permits still greater freedom of expression in cablegrams.

She Has Unusual Record of Service

Miss Irene Hawes

Twenty-five years in the same office—without missing a day, except during vacations.

Such is the record which will be marked this month by the presentation of a 25-year service emblem to Miss Irene Hawes, chief operator in Yellow Springs for The Ohio Bell Telephone Company.

Miss Hawes, who lives at 111 Center College street, Yellow Springs, is a native of the Blue Grass State, her birthplace being Hawesville, Kentucky, where she attended high school.

Her first job was as a clerk in her brother's store in Kentucky. Later she became secretary at the Methodist Home in Yellow Springs.

Miss Hawes' service in the telephone business began on the morning of November 17, 1903, the day on which the Yellow Springs exchange was opened. Since then, she has been on the job in the Yellow Springs office, rain or shine, without missing a day through illness or anything else.

"No matter how bad the weather might be, Miss Hawes always manages to reach the office," said R. D. Eyer, district commercial manager of the Telephone Company. "Even the worst of blizzards could not keep her away."

Miss Hawes has two hobbies—her work and her radio.
